

Mikhail Pyatnitskiy

Mikhail received MSc in Medical Biophysics at the Russian State Medical University in 2006. In 2005 he started his research career at the Institute of Biomedical Chemistry where he got his PhD in Bioinformatics in 2009 and currently is a head of Medical Genomics group. After graduation from Yandex' Data Analysis School in 2013 (department of Bioinformatics), Mikhail has been consulting in the field of bioinformatics, aging and precision oncology several companies including Ariadne Genomics and later Ariadne Diagnostics, Gero, Oncogenotest, Smartomica and others. Since 2017 Mikhail is a lecturer at the HSE University where he developed a course entitled “Systems biology and personalized medicine” dedicated to the analysis of -omics data. Current Mikhail’s research interests include systems biology and its clinical applications.